The annual Colloquium on Aging is an important part of the UW-Madison Institute on Aging’s mission to provide information to the general public about current research in aging. It includes UW & guest speakers, a Health & Resource Fair, and a Poster Session. The event is free & open to the public, but space is limited. Registration, which opens the first Monday in August, fills up within a week with over 550 people interested in positive aging.

POSTER SESSION

We invite faculty, staff, students, postdocs, and others from UW-Madison to submit a poster for the event that pertains to new research in the field of aging or life course studies. The information on the poster should be comprehensible to the general public, who are the majority of the attendees. The IOA poster printer is available for printing accepted posters at no charge.

NEW INVESTIGATOR AWARD • $300

UW-Madison students and advanced trainees (including graduate & medical students; postgraduate trainees; and postdoctoral fellows, trainees, or research associates) who enter a poster can also apply for the $300 award, which recognizes outstanding achievement among new investigators. Award applications will be accepted for research in any area pertaining to aging or life course studies (e.g., biomedical, psychosocial, or clinical/applied research). Work must be substantially the applicant’s own research.

APPLICATION DEADLINE is Sunday, July 30, 2017

For complete details, see the application, which can be obtained from Theresa Berrie (berrie@wisc.edu • 261-1493) or is available online at: aging.wisc.edu/outreach/colloquium.php
